This House Would pay obese people to lose weight

We should pay obese people to lose weight

Some background information

Obesity is a health problem that affects around 25% of adults, and 20% of children. It has long term harms on health in a variety of ways. Sometimes, paying someone to do something can encourage them to do it. Do you think we should pay people if they start losing weight?

Starter questions

Will this encourage people to eat healthier and exercise more? Or are their other things getting in the way of people's desire to do this?

Does getting paid to eat healthily and exercise make it seem like a job? Does this change how people feel about doing it?

Does this stigmatise people who may be overweight through no fault of their own?
